New product protects medical personnel on the COVID-19 frontlines

C2Dx announces partnership with Schupan to distribute Aero|Guard Protection Barrier

Kalamazoo, Mich. (April 30, 2020)—C2Dx Inc., a medical device company that provides the gold standard in aiding in the diagnosis of compartment syndrome, announces immediate availability of the Aero|Guard Personal Protection Barrier. The Aero|Guard provides additional protection to healthcare personnel during the incredibly high-risk intubation and extubation processes. The unique, collapsible design allows ease in storing, sanitizing and set up while offering greater versatility in the OR, ICU and ER.

“It is vitally important to arm hospitals, not only to combat the current crisis and any potential COVID flareups, but to better prepare for future respiratory pandemics,” said Kevin McLeod, Chief Executive Officer, C2Dx. “We are proud to partner with a trusted company like Schupan to provide our customers with this desperately needed product.”

Designed by a Certified Registered Nurse Anesthetist, the Aero|Guard provides protection when and where it is needed most—the patent-pending collapsible tab and pin design:

- Aids in easy, quick set-up
- Creates a smaller storage footprint
- Reduces opportunity for contagion collection
- Enables easy department or room to room mobility

“As so many people have rallied to fight this disease, we are honored that we could participate by offering another form of PPE to the teams in the trenches,” said Cynthia Ansari, Chief Growth Officer, C2Dx. “We know these are critical moments for our frontline healthcare providers and critical decisions must be made for the safety of all involved.”

The Aero|Guard Personal Protection Barrier provides an opportunity to save lives today and be better prepared for tomorrow. To learn more or purchase, visit www.C2Dxinc.com/aeroguard.
